Men's Tennis

In the spring of 1986, the boys' Varsity Tennis team had an impressive season as they finished with ten wins and three losses. The Eagles' strength in the lower singles and doubles positions combined with gutsy performances by the top players made B.C. a feared force in the Suburban Council. Although they were young (no seniors), the Eagles showed first-year coach Ray Fetcho much maturity by reaching the semifinals of the Section II Team Tournament.

B.C.'s depth was perhaps its greatest asset. The duo of Eric and Stan Lee, who occupied the top two singles spots during the season, were finalists in both the Suburban Council and Section II Doubles Tournaments thereby qualifying for the State Tournament. Neil Breslin, the baby of the squad, came through with many clutch performances during the season. Brian Saelens and Jeff Grant both reached the quarterfinals in the Suburban Council Singles Tournament before losing to the top two seeds respectively. Mark Woodruff rounded out the six singles positions well by providing a deadly left-handed attack.

In doubles, Sam Ernst and Dave Cory, who had never played together as a team, gave rival first doubles teams many problems. The unique tandem of Dave Cunningham and Jeff Ellenbogen confused and stymied all opponents. Veteran doubles team Alex Hall and Scott Reed helped to clinch numerous victories with their courageous play.

With all these players returning, the Eagles should be a very dominant team in 1987.
